

John Bailey is a trumpet player, bandleader, composer and educator based in New York City. He became a member of The Buddy Rich Band while still in college, and his career has included long-running gigs with Ray Charles, master conguero Ray Barretto, Frank Sinatra Jr. and many others. His work with Latin Jazz innovator Arturo O'Farrill won him Three Grammy awards. He has played on hundreds of albums as a leader and sideman.

Early in his teaching career John taught at the University of Miami and Florida International University. Today John teaches younger students in NYC and Westchester County. He believes that educating the next generation of musicians is a very important activity for any artist. "By keeping performance standards at the highest level and sharing our devotion to music with others, especially children, we enrich countless lives."
